

GRANATA

DAL 1936

TRADITION

TASTES OF ITALY FROM 1920

Antonio Granata laid the foundations of the company more than 90 years ago: since then, we—his children and grandchildren—have never stopped working to preserve his priceless legacy, his values, and his teachings. Every day, through teamwork, we bring to the table products with an authentic taste, always fresh and always genuine.

Since 1936, we have been caring for olives and processing them without haste and with great attention, as one does with the things one treasures most. To this passion and dedication, we have added the most advanced techniques, always in compliance with current regulations and with respect for the environment.

Every step of our production process is carefully studied: from the growth of the olives in the splendid land of Sicily, to the harvest, and then on to the inspection and packaging of the products at our headquarters in Gricignano di Aversa.

Staying true to our origins is a central and essential element of our entire business. It is present in everything we do: with our commitment and, above all, thanks to those who choose us every day, our company continues to grow, reaching beyond borders.

INNOVATION

SAFETY

AND QUALITY

Across the entire supply chain, we strictly adhere to all food safety standards, ensuring that every processing stage is fully compliant with sector-specific regulations.

We have obtained all the required certifications to operate in broader markets, which has enabled us to expand our customer base and strengthen our international presence year after year.

Our packaging solutions are also subject to continuous innovation, not only to preserve product freshness, but primarily to minimize the environmental impact of our production processes.

BONDS

FROM THE VALLEY OF BELICE

We cultivate our olives in Castelvetrano, in the heart of the Belice Valley in Sicily: a land rich in history and culture, ideal for producing the Nocellara variety. Since 2010, we have been part of a joint venture in Castelvetrano, enabling efficient production through state-of-the-art packaging lines capable of producing up to 12,000 units per hour. The olives are harvested, prepared, and packaged according to the traditional Castelvetrano method, giving them a distinctive flavor. This connection to Sicily dates back many years, when Antonio Granata would travel to the island every late September for the harvest and selection of the olives.

The Belice Valley, crossed by the eponymous river, is a place where history and natural beauty intertwine, with a unique biodiversity resulting from the presence of both the Belice River and the Mediterranean Sea. In this region, olive cultivation has a tradition spanning over 2,600 years.

The Nocellara olive tree produces round fruits on drooping branches, and the Belice Valley stands out for its high level of single-variety specialization, unique compared to other olive-growing areas.
